Mental Health Myths & Facts

MYTH 1

Mental health problems won't affect me.

Fact: Mental health issues are very common. In 2020, one in five American adults experienced a mental health issue and one in six young people experienced a major depressive episode.

MYTH 2

Children don't experience mental health problems.

Fact: Young children show early warning signs of mental health concerns. Half of all mental health disorders show first signs before a person turns 14 years old and three-quarters of mental health disorders begin before age 24.

MYTH 3

People with mental health problems are violent and unpredictable.

Fact: Most people with mental illness are not violent and only 3%–5% of violent acts can be attributed to individuals living with a serious mental illness. In fact, people with severe mental illnesses are over 10 times more likely to be victims of violent crime than the general population.

MYTH 4

I can't do anything for a person with a mental health problem.

Fact: If your friend or loved one has a mental health challenge, you can be an important influence in helping them get treatment by:

- Reaching out and letting them know you are available to help
- Helping them access mental health services
- Learning and sharing the facts about mental health
- Treating them with respect, just as you would anyone else

MYTH 5

Prevention doesn't work. It is impossible to prevent mental illnesses.

Fact: Prevention of mental, emotional and behavioral disorders focuses on addressing known risk factors such as exposure to trauma that can affect the chances that children, youth and young adults will develop mental health problems. Promoting the social-emotional well-being of children and youth leads to:

- Higher overall productivity
- Better educational outcomes
- Lower crime rates
- Stronger economies
- Lower health care costs
- Improved quality of life
- Increased lifespan
- Improved family life
